

A Promise, I cannot Keep

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Monier

Joined on December 1, 1989

Our lives together had just begun
Born for each other, our souls were one

I remember it like it was yesterday
And yet it seems so far away

I made a promise to love, honor, and cherish
We had a special love that could not perish

Through sickness and in health, till death do us part
I loved him unconditionally, with all of my heart

I can not keep that promise today
Although my Scott has been taken away

I will always be his loving wife
For every day of the rest of my life

Very few find that special one
And I refuse to say our marriage is done

We have two beautiful girls that must be raised
Two girls their Daddy proudly praised

We often would talk of how lucky we were
We had two healthy girls, who could ask for more?

We had built our house, with our own two hands
We had it all, it was perfect- you understand?

How can I say that is has come to an end?
To say that I am a widow, I have to pretend

I made a promise to him in my heart
And though we are temporarily apart

I will continue to be his loving wife
And finish out our perfect life

I know he misses his family so
I know onward we must go
But I refuse to end our marriage today
Just because some jerk, took him away

He would not leave without a fight for his life
He would never leave his children, family, friends and his wife

Till death do us part is a lie you know
I married Scott forever, but forward I must go

Our marriage did not come to an end you see
I will try to continue his loving legacy

The love we have is stronger than eternity
I still feel his love, reaching down to me

Love can continue in the heavens above
I believe you get only one true love

So you see, our marriage did not end on that day
I will love my husband forever, and no one will take that away!

Scotts loving wife,
Vicki Monier

4-24-03